It characterizes the decree as not only erroneous, but a fraud upon the rights of the United States, and charges that irregular and unusual means, of which the Chancellor is alleged to have been cognizant, were used to keep the existence of the fund and of the suit from the knowledge of the United States supherities.

of the fund and of the suit from the knowledge of the United States authorities.

My course in this matter has been misconceived. And as the representative of a court whose good name has never suffered until now, from any imputation against the character of its members, of whom some have been eminent for learning and ability all for the reputation of high integrity, I deem it proper to make the following statement, and cause it to be filed with the proceedings in the cause. The particular means of concealment intended are not specified, and my method, therefore, shall be to explain, in order, but briefly, my dealing with the case from first to last. tended are not specified, and my meshed, therefore, shall be to explain, in order, but briefly, my dealing with the case from first to last.

In Junuary, 1866, a metion was made before me at Chambers, for an order to pay into court. The case disclosed by the bill was, first the Bank of the State held a fund is which it claimed no interest, and which was claimed by other parties to the state held a fund is which it claimed no interest, and which was claimed by other parties to the state held a fund is which it claimed no interest, and which was claimed by other parties to the state held a fund is which it claimed no interest, and which was claimed by other parties to the bull, and would not consent to the order. I therefore rathed to grant is. The motion was the received on the ground that the fund was in danger, it being the practice, in such a case, to make the order in unvium, even before answer filed. Danger in this case was inferred from an apprehension which then prevailed in the community, that the Bank, as a State institution, was a out to be taken possession of, as the City Gas Works had been some time before, whereby this fund, though constituting no part of the Banks proparty, would be placed beyond the reach of the court. I considered the ground sufficient, and an order was drawn up by counsel, which I signed. It was asked for and granted as a measure, proper and usual, for securing the fund for the benefit of all concerned, while the litigation lasted. Its purpose was security, not concealment. And as to the right to the fund, now asserted for the United States, it not only did not come under discussion, but the idea of its being the property of the United States, it not only did not come under discussion, but the idea of its being the property of the United States, it not only did not come under discussion, but the idea of its being the property of the United States, it is united States as a necessary or proper party to the proceeding.

the United States as a necessary or proper party to the proceeding.

Having made this order I heard no more of the case, and thought no more of it, until it came up in February, 1867, in open court on a motion to docket for tried. It then appeared that the pleadings had not been previously filed. But of that I was ignorant until the motion was made. It is proper to mention this, because withholding the pleadings from the file may be intended as one of the things called "irregular and unusual." It so, or warriors, who "have done the State solls set this disclaimer, I do not mean it to be understood that I disapprove the thing done. Lastly, an order was made for leave to athdraw the original papers from the file. Such an order, having, as in this case, the consent of all the parties, is so much a matter of course, that is was signed without question. Sheaffer Sales. —We notice in many of our State exchanges long lists of Sheriff sales for taxes. This is to be regretted. The Treasury is no doubt in a low state of funds, and must be replenshed—the State must have money, but is this the time to press a people who have been struggling all summer under a financial pressure to make a crop, the proceeds of which have not yet been realized. The wheat crop fell far short of what was at one time anticipated, and the money realized therefrom has nearly all been expended in huying provisions and other necessaries for the farm. Scarcely any cotton has yet been sold, and there is no money in the country, nor will there be until the cotton crop comes in. Property, when sold, will go for a son—the unfortunate debtors' property sacrideed, and yet their taxes, in many cases, not be paid. We hope our State authorities will reconsider this matter, and stay levy and sale at least until the cotton crop can be put upon the market. —Laurenswille Heratd.
